

A Wondrous Accident

By Jane Barnes

Some great writers or authors of today have been writing since they were young, perhaps starting with a simple journal, a diary, or snippets of poetry. However, some find writing by accident, and somehow that accident becomes a passion, just as it was for the author, Nadolyn H. Robinson.

Nadolyn's writing career began when she was asked to serve as a juror in a murder trial. Following that trial's conclusion, she decided to write down her feelings and experiences from this trying and emotional time. After reading what she had written, she believed it was good writing and realized she loved it. After that, the thoughts seemed to flow out of her, so she started writing them down.

Even though Nadolyn's career as an author started as an accident, she was equipped for it. Since first grade, her mother provided a daily atmosphere of consistent teaching and correct usage of verbs and consonants. As a teenager, their home was gracefully encased with books and encyclopedias. She fell in love with literature after reading the encyclopedias that came with a collection of William Shakespeare's The Complete Works and Tragedies, and she still has the volumes to this day.

Nadolyn now authored four books. Her book Blue Jungle is composed of satires and poems filled with spiritual revelations and thoughts from a quiet place. Her other works are Who's Fool Your Fool, Cocoon of Protection and Boo Hoo Blue Purdue.
